

Stress in Various Aspects of Your Life

People have different stresses in each aspect of their lives. For example, your stress with your family may be trying to convince your parents that you need a later curfew, while your stress with your friends might be in convincing them that you don't want to try smoking. Complete each circle by describing some of the stresses you have with whomever or whatever is mentioned in the center of the circle.

